Lansdowne's new look

Winner of park's design competition expected to be announced today

TIM WIECLAWSKI
tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

The winning entry for the design competition for the eastern half of Lansdowne Park is expected to be revealed sometime today.

The five entries, which range in estimated cost from $33 million to $88 million, were revealed anonymously May 20.

Displays of the designs have been touring the city under the labels Design A through E for the previous three weeks.

A seven-member competition jury had been deliberating over the entries until Friday before taking a break and getting back to work yesterday, said urban designer George Dark, who is heading the jury.

Dark would not comment on any of the entries specifically, but praised the thoughtfulness and creativity of all the entries.

"It's very rare to see this kind of consistent quality and this incredible range of ideas and creativity. It's an incredibly big deal," said Dark.

However, the designs are not getting the same reception from all members of the community.

Walter Hendelman, a member of Friends of Lansdowne, questioned why the submissions had not followed the competition guidelines more strictly.

Dark admitted that the guidelines are just to provide a backdrop and starting place, and submitting ideas that followed them to a tee is basically the kiss of death in design competitions.

"One of the things that a designer would tell you, if you got 20 of them in a room, is that the more you break the rules, the more you have a chance to win," he said.

One of the difficulties in selecting a winning bid is seeing which elements are fundamental to the park or impossible in the design and must be revised, Dark said.

Hendelman also said none of the submissions stated the proportion of open public space compared to the commercial property.

"How much of Lansdowne Park is going to be accessible to the public versus how much is going to be commercial? I'm looking for a number," said Hendelman. "If the public is confused or has lost interest, I really don't blame them."

Walk raises $2.1M for cancer research

HEALTH In late 2005, Genevieve Allen was diagnosed with breast cancer. Eight days later, she underwent a mastectomy and got a second mastectomy two years later.

Next Monday, the Ottawa woman is undergoing surgery again to have her ovaries and uterus removed after doctors discovered what they believe is a benign cyst on her ovary.

"I want to do everything I can," she said.

Yesterday and Saturday, she did just that as she walked 60 kilometres with 1,000 other participants at the fifth annual Weekend to End Women's Cancers, helping to raise $2.1 million for research and treatment and care for those diagnosed with breast and gynecological cancers throughout eastern Ontario.

Despite what she's gone through, Allen didn't walk for herself yesterday.

Her friend, Linda Guay, lost her battle with various forms of women's cancers earlier this year. Over the weekend, Allen carried Guay's running shoes the 60 kilometres, and then yesterday, across the finish line.

The walk is an emotional event, she said. "Everybody here has a story, and they're so heart-wrenching. There are so many courageous people here."

Coast guard sending oil boom to Gulf

OIL SLICK Canada is sending half of its ocean boom to the Gulf of Mexico to help U.S. authorities deal with the massive oil cleanup effort.

Today and tomorrow, 3,000 metres of the floating containment system will be trucked to Mobile, Ala., for deployment.

Gail Shea, the minister responsible for Canada's coast guard, says Washington's latest call for help came Friday.

Shea says Ottawa will do what it can to maximize its contribution to cleanup efforts.

Canada has already sent scientists from the Centre for Offshore Oil and Gas Environmental Research to monitor the effects of oil dispersants and a plane to track the slicks.

Shea says Ottawa expects to recover the $3-million cost of the boom this fiscal year.

FROM BLIND RIVER TO PARIS, FRANCE

BY PAUL BERTHELOT

When I was a kid, all the young boys in my hometown dreamed of being in the NHL. I, on the other hand, dreamed a casting agent would come from L.A. and discover me. Why an agent would travel to Blind River, population 3200, I didn't care. Needless to say, it never happened.

It was only this past February. I was out of work and looking through online ads for graphic design jobs. It was then that I decided to browse through the tv, media, fashion category. I saw someone needing extras for an 80's photo shoot and sent them a photo of myself. Days later they contacted me. Once I got to what I now realize was the RDI models and talent head office, they seemed interested in me for the job, or so I thought. They never booked me for that 80's photo shoot. Luckily I ended up with something more. The agent, Alex Markle, had seen something in me and offered me an exclusive one year contract.

I worked with them for a few short weeks. I practiced runway, expanded my portfolio and did mannequin modeling. Before I knew it, they had a photo shoot lined up for Flare magazine. It was crazy! I had been there less then a month and I was in a group photo shoot for Flare. Soon the same ad ran in Lou Lou. I was thrilled. The feeling of going past news stands, seeing magazines on the shelves and knowing I was amongst those pages was incredible. It was then that an offer was presented to me. RDI wanted to send a fellow male model, G, and I to Paris. They wanted us to do go-sees and photo shoots over a ten day period. It was an amazing opportunity and it didn't take me long to say yes.

> "The feeling of going past news stands, seeing magazines on the shelve and knowing I was amongst those pages was incredible"

We were flying out of Montreal and RDI surprised us with a limo as transportation. It felt surreal. We caught our flight and after many hours, lines and a layover in London we arrived in Paris. We soon realized that the limo was to be the most traditionally "glamorous" part of our adventure. The hotel room was about half the size of my bachelor apartment with two tiny single beds. As bad as that may sound, I couldn't help feeling that this is how every supermodel got their start. I thought of Twiggy, Heidi Klum and Tyra Banks telling stories about starting out as models. They too had to share model housing in strange cities all over the world. In those thoughts I found comfort and excitement. We were just like them.

The city was awe inspiring. I had always assumed that all those amazing photographs of Paris had been purposely taken in small areas that still had old art and architecture. In truth, the entire city looks like those photos. The architecture and history in every nook and cranny of Paris was stunning. We had go-sees all over the city. We went to legendary agencies like Ford Europe, Major Model Management, Idole etc. It's an extraordinary thing to walk into a room and have people study you up and down while they talk to you and to have that considered acceptable, which it was. They would often grab our portfolio, run to the next room for five minutes, return and simply say, "Pas pour nous, les gars", meaning basically "no thanks". If we were lucky they took our photos, measurement and gladly accepted our comp cards. Regardless of any negatives, it felt great to be considered a legitimate part of the fashion world.

The photographers were all very nice and accommodating. We did close-up studio shots and photo shoots all over the city including the Louvre and the stairs leading up to Sacré-Cœur. They all had the same goal of trying to make us look as good as possible and that felt unbelievable. Every picture you take in Paris looks like a postcard and these photos were no exception. Looking at the photos now, it's hard to believe I was ever there.

Between go-sees and photo shoots, we were able to experience Paris as tourists. We did and saw a million things. There are a couple moments that stand out from the rest that I know I'll never forget. As typical as it may sound, seeing the Eiffel tower in reality was astounding. Though we'd seen it from afar for a few days, when we walked up to the base of it I was in complete awe. I never imagined it would be so massive. The feeling of being so close to something so iconic was unbelievable. We spent three hours on the tower and I wasn't at all bored. We were standing on the balcony at sunset looking up at the rest of the tower as it performed its first shimmering light show of the evening. The crowd gasped and it was so magical. Another unforgettable moment was not at all planned. I was waiting in line in front of Notre Dame when I turned and saw a Parisian man smoking near some well trimmed bushes. At that moment he put his hand up holding a crust of bread and dozens of tiny, adorable birds emerged from the bushes and started pecking at the morsel of baguette. It was a moment plucked straight out of the pages of a fairy tail.

It wasn't long before we had to fly back to Canada. On the way home we were sitting in the limo taking us back to Ottawa and sipping champagne. It felt like I had just watched an extended episode of America's Next Top Model. I couldn't stop thinking how lucky I was and what a dreamlike experience it had all been. I'm still new at all of this and have a lot I want to accomplish. My advise may sound trite, but what I can say I know for sure is this: If you truly want something, are willing to work for it and surround yourself with people who genuinely support you, the seemingly impossible becomes attainable.◊

Telethon co-host proves doctors wrong

Resilience, determination aid teen in battle after near-fatal brain hemorrhage

TIM WIECLAWSKI
tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

There are few better people to have at your side during your first time co-hosting a telethon than retired CTV anchor Max Keeping.

"I wasn't nervous because Max was helping me through this," said 16-year-old Jacob Emmanuel Doyle, after spending an hour co-hosting the CHEO Telethon yesterday afternoon.

That Doyle even made it to the telethon set at the Canadian War Museum at all is something that doctors at the Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario said was nearly impossible almost two years ago.

Yesterday's telethon raised a record $6,258,971 for CHEO.

On June 30, 2008, Doyle suffered a brain hemorrhage that left him in a coma for two weeks.

When it first happened, he called his mother, Ann, at work, and described in increasingly slurring speech that he was losing sensation in the left side of his body.

By the time paramedics arrived at his house, he couldn't speak anymore. When they arrived at CHEO, he was unconscious.

TIM WIECLAWSKI/METRO OTTAWA

Jacob Emmanuel Doyle, 16, speaks with Max Keeping during his co-hosting stint at the CHEO Telethon yesterday afternoon at the Canadian War Museum.

Doctors warned his parents he may not survive. Even if he did, he might never walk or talk again, said his father, Louis.

Doyle finally spoke again in October 2008. He took his first step, an ordeal requiring a team of six helpers, in December 2008.

"It's amazing how kids, or anyone who goes through that, can be so resilient and not give up," Ann said.

Doyle's speech is laboured and he needs a walker to keep balance when he walks, but he's taking four courses a day at Samuel Genest High School and attending as many volleyball games as possible.

"I just hope to do more and prove the doctors wrong," said Doyle. "You name it, they didn't think I'd do it, but I'm proving them wrong right now."

Doors open for the very curious

WEEKEND Dorian Ryan knows exactly why he likes Doors Open Ottawa.

"I've always been a bit of a curious person, someone who likes to know what's going on," said the 32-year-old yesterday. "So I think this is a great idea."

Thousands of people checked out 119 locations, including embassies, places of worship, galleries, museums and government buildings over the weekend.

About 600 people came through the Library of Parliament, formerly the Bank of Nova Scotia at 125 Sparks St. over the weekend, said staff member Vanessa Hooper.

The library is open to parliamentarians, senators and their staff, as well as employees of the House of Commons, the Senate and the Parliamentary Press Gallery.

People are interested in this location "because it's not generally open to the public," said Hooper. "Most often, they're familiar with the Library of Parliament that's up on Parliament Hill, the big Centre Block library, so they're curious to see what we do here and what kinds of books and things we have."

Over in Manotick, around 800 people stopped by the Suntech Greenhouses to check out the 250,000 tomato plants growing inside the 2.5-acre greenhouse.

"It was actually a lot of fun and very exciting," said manager Doreen Moore. "It's excellent. We're looking forward to it again next year."

By that time, Moore said, they will have four acres of greenhouse space. Suntech also grows eggplants, mini cucumbers, and cherries.

This is the fifth year the company has participated in Doors Open Ottawa.

Walk raises $45,000

Muscular dystrophy event brings in care, research funds

Debra Chiabai first noticed that something was wrong when her son, Alex, was about a year and a half old.

"He was delayed in a lot of his milestones, like sitting up, rolling over, standing and walking. He had some speech delays as well," she said.

A year later, Alex was diagnosed with a type of muscular dystrophy.

"It's a very difficult thing to cope with," said Chiabai, who got involved with the Ottawa chapter of Muscular Dystrophy Canada soon afterward. "Things are still possible, but you need to do it differently."

Alex, now 10, is doing well, she said. "He's not as strong as other kids, so he has trouble running and participating in some activities."

Hundreds of people raised $45,086 for the annual Walk for Muscular Dystrophy yesterday. But equally importantly, the event serves to teach people about muscular dystrophy, Chiabai said.

TRACEY TONG/METRO OTTAWA

Hundreds of people raised $45,086 for the annual Walk for Muscular Dystrophy, held at city hall yesterday.

"It lets (Alex) see that people can actually live with muscular dystrophy," she said. "You can be out and be a part of the community."

There are more than 50,000 Canadians living with a neuromuscular disorder.

"Often, people are affected by a significant impact on their mobility or a loss of mobility," Chiabai said, adding the disease can also affect the lungs and heart.

The funds raised provide ongoing support and resources, as well as funding research.

"Ottawa is a centre of excellence for neuromuscular research," said Dr. Rashmi Kothary, an associate director with the Ottawa Health Research Institute and a professor at the University of Ottawa.

Part 1 in a three-part series on the government's efforts to exert control over its message

Bottled Messages
Special Report

An MP's Sunday afternoon visit to a seniors' home. The federal purchase of powerful new military aircraft. A journalism student's innocuous query about Africa.

One thing connects them all — the Conservative government scripted each event using a potent but little-known communication tool called the Message Event Proposal.

The Canadian Press has obtained almost 1,000 pages of MEPs from several government departments, including the Privy Council Office, under the Access to Information Act. The PCO, the bureaucratic nerve centre of Ottawa, has been conscripted by an increasingly powerful Prime Minister's Office to vet requests for public events across the federal government.

The MEPs have blurred the time-honoured separation of non-partisan public servants and political staffers and sidelined seasoned government communicators, sapping morale across the civil service.

They have become the political tool for literally putting words in the mouths of cabinet ministers, federal bureaucrats, low-profile MPs on the barbecue circuit, and seasoned diplomats abroad.

What goes into an MEP

- An MEP template typically includes the following subtitles: Event, event type, desired headline, key messages, media lines, strategic objectives, desired soundbite, ideal speaking backdrop, ideal event photograph, tone, attire, rollout materials, background and strategic considerations.

"Your authorization is sought for President Greenhill to respond to questions ... during the press conference," reads one MEP prepared by the Canadian International Development Agency asking the PCO to allow its then-president, Robert Greenhill, to speak at a high-level United Nations panel.

The MEP is the crucial communication instrument for a minority government that values staying on message above all else — a transformation that federal officials and public-policy analysts say is undermining democracy. While all governments try to control the message, the ambitious sweep of MEPs is unprecedented in federal politics.

Critics say it contradicts the core campaign promise that brought Prime Minister Stephen Harper to power — introducing a new era of government transparency and accountability.

"We discussed every single issue and micromanaged every news release — everything," said one former Harper-era PCO official. "Pretty much any event, or any rollout of an announcement, would have an MEP that would lay out the strategy."

A review of hundreds of MEPs spanning several years reveals the vast sweep of control exerted by the Harper government. They have been used to orchestrate almost everything from the rollout of billion-dollar purchases of military aircraft to the donation of a few thousand dollars to a community group.

The identities of senior sources who have worked at PCO and other departments are not being revealed because they fear retribution from their political masters.

Political scientist Jonathan Rose says the MEP is worrisome because there are "bureaucrats who are doing the government's partisan work and also political staffers who are doing bureaucrats' work. So there's this huge blurring of lines between the two."

The Prime Minister's Office declined to comment on this story.

Are families of unmarried soldiers being treated fairly?

BENEFIT The Canadian Human Rights Commission is examining whether Ottawa discriminates against families of single soldiers killed overseas by excluding them from a quarter-million dollar death benefit.

The Canadian Press has learned the agency plans to convene a tribunal hearing some time in the next few months. It will weigh the complaint of an Ontario couple whose son Cpl. Matthew Dinning died in a roadside bomb attack in Kandahar four years ago.

"Married and single soldiers have fought side-by-side in Afghanistan, they wore the same uniform, they died for the same country ... they should be treated the same as far as death benefits go," Lincoln Dinning said.

Hawking visits Ontario

Talk about winning the brain-drain wars. Ontario has landed what may be the best one in the world.

After years of waiting and academic oneupmanship, Stephen Hawking, formerly of Cambridge University, finally arrived over the weekend for a visit.

Almost two years ago, rumours began of Hawking's move to Waterloo's Perimeter Institute for Theoretical Physics from Cambridge.

Reports of a tug-of-war for Hawking between the venerable English institution and the heavily funded upstart research facility began in 2008. At the time, Cambridge denied any such move, but last year announced Hawking's retirement in October.

That was after Perimeter director Neil Turok, a one-time colleague of Hawking's at Cambridge, left England to take up his new role, in part because the university would not spend $40 million to expand its Centre for Theoretical Cosmology (which Turok headed) to create a Hawking Institute. In the summer of 2008, Turok told Britain's Telegraph newspaper, "He plans to visit me in Ontario next year for a month or so, and we would certainly welcome him coming for longer." But poor health last year prevented that.

Hawking now holds a Distinguished Research Chair at the Perimeter Institute with construction of the Stephen Hawking Centre underway. This is his first visit.

Scientists across Canada, theoretical physicists in particular, are giddy about having a man whose stated goal is nothing short of "a complete understanding of the universe" in their own backyard, at least until July, when Hawking's visit will end. But many more are planned. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Look out, ladies: Peter MacKay is single (again)

MARRIAGE For months he blamed his delayed wedding vows on the uncertainty of a minority government. Turns out, Peter MacKay may just not have been ready for marriage. Cue the swooning single ladies gasping as Canada's most eligible bachelor comes back onto the market.

A spokesman to the federal defence minister says the split with television executive Jana Juginovic, just a few weeks after a year-long study period at Harvard University, was "amicable" and said the two remain friends.

Peter MacKay (right)

Others say that rumours have been circulating for ages that something was not right in the relationship.

Whatever the buildup to the breakup, this now makes three times that the camera-friendly cabinet minister with the Roman nose and sporty physique has been swept up by ladies seemingly intent on laying claim to MacKay.

Three times he has either broken hearts or had his heart broken.

MacKay dumped his longtime partner Lisa Merrithew, by his side when he took over leadership of the Progressive Conservative Party in 2003, and later took up with fellow Tory MP Belinda Stronach when he was deputy leader of the united right-wing party.

Unlike his breakup with Stronach, this time there was a simple whisper to a political gossip columnist, a two-line confirmation from MacKay's Ottawa spokesman, and a stream of stories on what passes for intrigue in the nation's capital. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Transit: The clean air express

Last Monday, smoke blew in from forest fires in Quebec and gave Ottawa its worst-ever recorded air quality readings, just in time to get our attention for Clean Air Day.

On Clean Air Day, Ottawa introduced the Air Quality Health Index (AQHI), a scale from 1 to 10+ for measuring the presence of three major pollutants — ozone, nitrogen oxide, and particulate matter. The daily readings, available at www.airhealth.ca, let people, particularly those with respiratory or heart conditions, time their outdoor activities for when breathing is safer.

Spreading greater awareness of air quality problems is the first step to mobilizing a desire to do something about them. Health Canada, after all, estimates air pollution causes 5,900 deaths per year in our major cities. A trend of generally warmer temperatures has exacerbated the problem. Last year's cool, wet summer gave us a break from smog, but air quality advisories are likely to mount again this year.

OC Transpo and STO, meanwhile, played to their strengths on Clean Air Day, offering two-for-one fares for all riders, encouraging them to bring a friend and reminding us that mass transit helps keep pollution down year-round.

It might not be obvious as you suck fumes from the rush hour conga line of buses queued up downtown on Slater or Albert, but OC Transpo is right out front in the fight against air pollution, and its performance keeps getting better.

Our diesel-electric hybrid buses are only truly effective on downtown routes with plenty of stops, as braking recharges the buses' batteries.

For the long-haul routes, we still use conventional buses, but this spring the city decided on a $155-million purchase of 226 new models, featuring more efficient, less polluting engines, another win for Ottawa air quality.

The major benefit from our buses, of course, is in the number of cars it takes off the road, in reducing the amount of pollution generated by each commuter. Light rail, should it ever come to pass, would see greater volumes of passengers moved with even less of a toll on the air we breathe.

Word seems to be getting around. It was encouraging to see, according to a poll commissioned by the Ottawa Sun, that transit and light rail top the list of important issues for the coming municipal election, selected by 32 per cent of respondents, twice as many as those who picked taxes, the No. 2 choice.

As one of a growing number of city dwellers with respiratory problems, I appreciate it from the bottom of my lungs.

Pot club raids help organized crime: Senator

Police have done the Mob and street gangs a favour by cracking down on cannabis clubs, say pot decriminalization advocates.

They warn people will now be buying their stuff from criminal networks instead of tax-paying businesses.

Thirty-five people were arrested in raids on Quebec's so-called "compassion clubs" — storefront outlets operating in plain view — while 90 kilograms of cannabis were also seized Thursday.

Those clubs in Montreal and Quebec City offered a wide selection of marijuana to customers who claimed a medical condition and provided a doctor's note.

Police argue the clubs were selling to healthy people and essentially were drug-trafficking operations.

Senator Pierre Claude Nolin says users of medicinal marijuana are now forced to find it elsewhere, and the vast majority will wind up getting it from criminal gangs.

After making the arrests, police themselves declared the clubs had no connection to criminal gangs.

"It's the most disastrous consequence of the whole operation," said Nolin, a longtime advocate for relaxed drug laws.

"The vast majority will have to look at the black market ... and the substance on the black market is not exactly the quality substance that are received in the clubs."

He says research suggests there are roughly one million Canadians who say they smoke cannabis for medical purposes, while less than 5,000 such permits have been issued by Health Canada.

That means, he says, the vast majority will have to find their supply elsewhere.

World Cup brings 'hope, pride': Zuma

President Jacob Zuma, left, yesterday declared South Africa ready for the start of the World Cup and praised the tournament for bringing cohesion to his once divided nation. Five days from the kickoff, Zuma said the nation has not witnessed such enthusiasm and excitement since former president Nelson Mandela was released from an apartheid-era prison in 1990. "Millions of our people have waited for years and look upon this tournament with hope, pride and a sense of belonging," he said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Turkish activists were planning a fight: Israel

GAZA Israel's prime minister claimed yesterday that Turkish activists who battled Israeli naval commandos in a deadly clash last week prepared for the fight ahead of time, boarding the ship in a different city from the rest of the passengers.

Benjamin Netanyahu's charges highlight Israel's frantic efforts to portray the activists as terrorists and counter a wave of international condemnation that has left the Jewish state at odds with some of its closest allies.

Last Monday's operation, in which nine activists were killed aboard a ship headed to the blockaded Gaza Strip, damaged Israel's ties with Turkey — its main Muslim ally — and brought heavy pressure on Israel to lift the three-year closure of Hamas-ruled Gaza.

Netanyahu said that "dozens of thugs" from "an extremist, terrorism-supporting" organization had readied themselves for the arrival of the naval commandos.

Huwaida Arraf, a leader of the Free Gaza Movement, which organized the flotilla, denounced Netanyahu's claims as "another pack of lies."

Cap working, BP says

But oil will still clog the Gulf for months, coast guard warns

As the White House struggled to regain the American public's trust as oil continues to gush from a BP well at the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico, the oil giant said its containment cap — its latest effort to plug the leak — was beginning to capture greater amounts of crude.

BP said it has increased the amount of oil being collected from its oozing well to 10,500 barrels a day and expects the quantity to increase in the days to come, a rare bit of promising news in the midst of the worst oil spill in U.S. history.

The containment cap is capturing "probably the vast majority" of the leaking oil, Tony Hayward, the beleaguered CEO of BP, told the BBC in an interview on Sunday.

Admiral Thad Allen, the White House's point man on the disaster, backed up BP's numbers, but also cautioned against getting too optimistic.

"We're making the right progress," Allen, making the rounds of the Sunday talk shows, said on CNN. "I don't think anyone should be pleased as long as there's oil in the water."

Allen said the gushing oil is just one of several fronts in a battle in the gulf that will stretch on for months.

"This is a war," he said.

BP is paying

• An official for BP PLC says the oil giant has paid 18,000 claims along the Gulf Coast totalling more than $48 million. Darryl Willis, a BP vice-president, said yesterday that the company has received 37,000 claims so far. President Barack Obama warned last week during a trip to Louisiana that he didn't want BP "nickel-and-diming people" who claim to have lost money because of the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico.

Karzai shakes things up, fires top security officials

AFGHANISTAN Afghan President Hamid Karzai yesterday removed two of the country's top security officials — each with longtime ties to the Americans — over last week's attack on a national conference to explore peace with the Taliban.

The removals of the interior minister and intelligence chief surprised U.S. officials and may cause major disruption within Afghanistan's intelligence and security establishment at a critical juncture — as the U.S. and NATO escalate the war and the Afghan government commits to offering peace to the insurgents. The move is likely to fuel speculation over differences within the Karzai administration over its efforts to reconcile with the Taliban — including the possible release of hundreds of detained militant suspects.

The head of the National Directorate of Security, Amrullah Saleh, was a senior figure in the Northern Alliance that helped the U.S. oust the Taliban regime in 2001.

"It's a very significant event. There will be a massive fall-out from these resignations both in the Interior Ministry and the NDS as alliances are shuffled," said Candace Rondeaux, senior analyst on Afghanistan for the International Crisis Group think-tank.

Website calling for coup: Chavez

MEDIA Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez called on authorities yesterday to investigate an article on a critical website that he said appears aimed at inciting a coup.

Chavez read aloud from the Noticiero Digital article in which columnist Roberto Carlos Olivares writes that active and former military officers have been meeting to plan an "inevitable" transition in the country.

Speaking on his weekly broadcast program, Chavez said the piece constitutes an apparent crime and told his vice-president, "This must be investigated urgently."

"Attempts to incite a coup d'etat continue appearing, and this cannot be permitted," Chavez said. The president, who survived a short-lived coup in 2002, has often accused his opponents of plotting against him.

Noticiero Digital, which takes an anti-Chavez line and has repeatedly been criticized by the president, posted a report on Chavez's remarks but did not immediately respond to his accusation. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

McCain faces serious fight

Two years shy of his failed presidential bid, Republican Sen. John McCain is battling for his political life in a race that embodies the volatility in the U.S. during an unpredictable election year.

The four-term senator is facing a primary challenge from former Rep. J.D. Hayworth, who is pushing him farther to the right as Republican voters demand conservative purity in their candidates and punish anyone with ties to the Washington establishment.

"He's been there too long. And he hasn't done anything for Arizona."
Ally Miller, constituent

McCain's popularity fell in Arizona as he spent years campaigning outside of it, twice for the White House. Hayworth, a radio talk show host who had been in Congress for a dozen years but lost to a Democrat in 2006, saw a chance for a political comeback.

The behemoth in the race, McCain has a decades-old political organization, millions in the bank and six campaign offices. He's counting on his deep ties to Arizona and legions of longtime backers to carry him through. In contrast, Hayworth has never run statewide, is struggling to raise money and has just two offices. But he's being fuelled by disaffected McCain backers and voters hungry for new leadership.

"He's been there too long. And he hasn't done anything for Arizona," Ally Miller says of McCain, 73. "It's time for someone new."

Among Hayworth supporters, there's a feeling that McCain hasn't been a loyal Republican, he's ignored Arizona and his time has passed. Many have voted for him for years — because, they say, there wasn't another option. With the 51-year-old Hayworth, people fed up with the status quo — and unwilling to automatically give McCain a new six-year term — have somewhere to turn.

At a Hayworth appearance at a Tucson library, attended by roughly 50 backers who gave the candidate a warm reception, the chorus of complaints sounded like a death knell for McCain. "Hayworth is a true conservative patriot," said John Kessler. "McCain has become a big government, tax-and-spend liberal."

Easing wireless restrictions

Ottawa could loosen foreign ownership regulations

Canada's wireless industry could be lined up for a dose of competitive fervour if Ottawa launches its anticipated loosening of foreign ownership restrictions and throws open the doors to outside investors in the coming months.

Analysts widely anticipate that Industry Minister Tony Clement could unveil further details of government's plans for changes to ownership in the communications industry during a key note speech slated for this morning at the Canadian Telecom Summit in Toronto.

The minister is expected to first seek the opinions of Canadians after unveiling the details of the government's plan.

"Certainly he'll put feelers out and see what kind of response he gets to it," said Mark Tauschek, senior research analyst with InfoTech Research Group.

Clement has become the face of potential changes in Canada's wireless industry after making the controversial decision last year to overrule the CRTC, and permit Egyptian-funded cellphone operator Globalive Wireless to open shop in Canada. At that time, Clement said the decision wasn't intended to set a precedent for the industry.

However, the move shook up existing telecom regulations — which limit direct and indirect foreign investment to 46.7 per cent — and established a new potential for companies wanting to build a presence in the country.

"You can pull that trick once, twice — you can't really pull it three times plus," said National Bank analyst Greg MacDonald.

"They've got to address the Act itself."

Clement's plan faces a wall of challenges both from the industry, regulators and critics who question whether easing restrictions would tighten the noose for Canadian companies. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Going Green

EDITOR: BEN.RYCROFT@METRONEWS.CA

MICHAEL STRACHAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Today's trucks are using GPS along with other technologies to help curb dirty emissions.

Cleaner, greener future

New generation of truckers to be more advanced

BEN KNIGHT
for Metro Canada

Many Canadians see transport trucks as a necessary evil. Necessary, because just about any product you buy anywhere likely spent part of its journey to market on a truck. Evil, because of the noise, highway congestion, dust, vehicle size, pollution ....

Well, maybe not pollution. Changes in emission standards in both Canada and the United States, coupled with innovative new technologies, have made the latest generation of big rigs — by far — the cleanest ever seen on our highways.

"Smog emission has been completely and successfully dealt with," says Paul R. Landry, president and CEO of the British Columbia Trucking Association.

"If you were to look at a new truck back in '98 or '99, you'd see smoke coming out of the stack. Every time the gas pedal went down, there'd be this puff of absolutely black smoke. Today's trucks are extremely clean. You could go into Los Angeles with a 2010 truck, and it would take dirty air, clean it, and put it right back in circulation."

That covers just about all dirty emissions — particulates, carbon monoxide — that haze up cities and irritate people's lungs and eyes. And, as anyone who lives near a well-travelled road knows, also leaves a layer of dirt on windows, walls and even furniture.

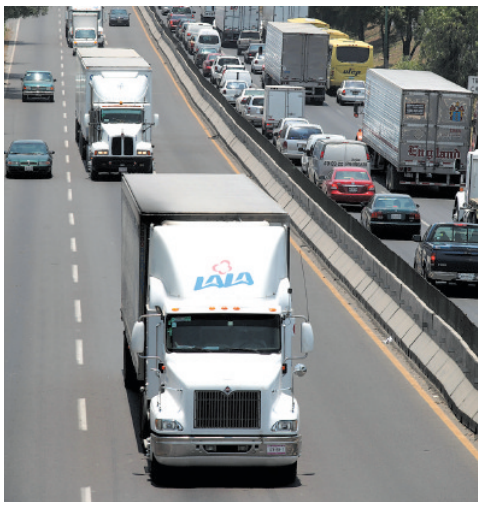
Still an issue, though, is the emission of greenhouse gases like carbon dioxide. "Unfortunately, the contradiction we've been faced with is that, until 2010, the technology that focused on reduced smog emissions has caused us to actually consume more fuel," Landry concedes. "When we put on those particulate traps in 2007, it added weight to the truck, and caused an increase in energy consumption."

The answer? Greater fuel efficiency. And there are many ways to achieve that.

"There are technologies that can be deployed in terms of aerodynamics and anti-idling devices," Landry notes. "Similarly, a well-trained driver can reduce your fuel consumption by 10 to 15 per cent. We can use GPS to ensure we've got our routing right, and keep our trucks are as full as possible to reduce the number of trucks that need to be on the road."

All of this costs money, of course. And Landry says his industry could really use some outside help.

"We'd like to have a greater partnership with government in terms of providing access to that capital," he concludes. "When you have to spend that extra $20,000 to $30,000 on a tractor for aerodynamics or an anti-idling device, getting your hands on that capital is really a challenge."



A smart driver can reduce fuel consumption up to 15 per cent

Moving goods

- Trucks are the primary mode of freight transportation in the Ottawa-Carleton region. Ottawa maintains a truck route system that keeps goods moving, while minimizing industry impact on residential areas. Consideration is given to reducing through truck traffic in the central area, while ensuring and maintaining the safe and efficient movement of goods.

Hawks one win away

Chicago's offence erupts to take 3-2 lead over Flyers

(Chicago leads series 3-2)

Flyers 4 Blackhawks 7

Dustin Byfuglien scored two goals and had two assists as the Chicago Blackhawks got off to a quick start and beat the Philadelphia Flyers 7-4 last night for a 3-2 lead in the Stanley Cup final.

Brent Seabrook added a power-play goal and Dave Bolland, Kris Versteeg, Patrick Kane and Patrick Sharp also scored for the Blackhawks.

Chicago can capture the Stanley Cup for the first time since 1961 with a victory Wednesday night in Philadelphia in Game 6. A Flyers win would send the series back to Chicago for a decisive Game 7 on Friday night.

All five wins in the series have come on home ice.

Scott Hartnell, Kimmo Timonen, James van Riemsdyk and Simon Gagne scored for the Flyers. Gagne's goal with 2:36 left made it 6-4, but a half-minute later Byfuglien converted an empty-netter.

After two straight losses in Philadelphia, a return to the United Center invigorated the Blackhawks as did some line mixing by coach Joel Quenneville.

The Blackhawks blitzed Flyers goalie Michael Leighton with three goals in the final 7:43 of the first period and the crowd erupted as Chicago quickly found the offensive game that had helped it make the final.

Allen, Rondo lead Celtics past Lakers to even finals

(Series tied 1-1)

Celtics 103 Lakers 94

NBA Ray Allen scored 27 of his 32 points in the first half with a record-setting three-point shooting display, Rajon Rondo completed a triple-double down the stretch and the Boston Celtics evened the NBA finals with a 103-94 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers in Game 2 last night.

Allen hit a finals-record eight three-pointers in a dazzling effort for the Celtics. Rondo then took charge after Allen cooled down, racking up 19 points, 12 rebounds and 10 assists in his fifth playoff triple-double to hand Los Angeles its first home loss of the post-season.

"An entire team effort," Rondo said. "Ray carried us through the first half. Second half, we got in a little slump but we stuck with it, stayed together and got a victory."

Kobe Bryant scored 21 points while battling more foul trouble for the Lakers, who hadn't lost a home playoff game since last year's Western Conference finals.

Game 3 is tomorrow night in Boston.

NASCAR Denny Hamlin won again at Pocono, pulling away from teammate Kyle Busch following a late restart yesterday in the 500-mile race at the massive 2.5-mile oval. The victory was Hamlin's fourth of the season and fourth in nine career starts at the "tricky triangle."

Attitude important to staying in school
According to a survey at the University of Maryland, if students' attitudes toward their school eight weeks into the academic year was positive, they tended to stay; if it was strongly negative, they tended to leave. Thus proving, "Attitude matters," according to one of the co-authors of the study. METRO NEWS SERVICES

Students not so smart with debt

A "shocking" lack of financial aid literacy exists among students, according to a new report based on a survey of Canadian university students. Results show that 75 per cent of respondents, including 54 per cent of upper-year government loan recipients, failed the financial aid literacy test posed in the survey. The Canadian Alliance of Student Associations says the report shows a severe lack of financial aid literacy that needs to be addressed. METRO NEWS SERVICES

A globetrotting Tupperware queen

OddJobs
Diane Peters

Metronews.ca/oddjobs

Through Tupperware comes a dream vacation? When Jennifer Schultz, pictured, first became a Tupperware salesperson, she did not expect that it would eventually lead to a trip to Argentina, right.

Jennifer Schultz went from burping babies to burping Tupperware. This was not her plan. The native of Kitchener, Ont., studied early childhood education and taught in Montessori school.

After getting married and having two kids and settling in nearby Waterloo, Schultz decided she wanted to be a stay-at-home mom. When her youngest was three years old, in 2005, she went to a Tupperware party at a friend's house, she even agreed to hold her own.

Her first party raked in $1,000 — a success — but when salesperson offered her a kit to run her own parties, she only half-heartedly agreed:

"I was a bit embarrassed at first. It wasn't cool. I'd done things in my life. Me, a Tupperware lady?"

She began hosting parties a few nights a week. The time demand was minimal and the products sold themselves: Along with plastic containers, the company offered knives, kitchen linens, teas and pots and pans. But she often lost heart and wondered how anyone ever made real money at the job.

About 10 months later, and after almost giving up a few times, she realized that she could be a lot more successful if she didn't just focus on selling Tupperware, but tried as well to recruit new salespeople.

"I was a bit embarrassed at first. It wasn't cool. I'd done things in my life. Me, a Tupperware lady?"
Jennifer Schultz
Tupperware extraordinaire

Schultz's sales force grew and soon she began getting rewards from the company — including trips to Disney World and Argentina, as well as a new convertible.

She now has 60 sales representatives who pay her a portion of their sales. Some she recruited from parties, others through her website, many of whom live far enough away that she's never met them.

For those who do live nearby, she holds regular meetings to offer selling tips. Schultz also regularly meets and talks with other Tupperware salespeople to keep her own skills sharp.

Her workday begins at 9:30 a.m., when her kids are at school. At least three nights a week she's out to run parties or attend meetings. It adds up to about 20 hours a week, which suite her and her kids just fine: "Every time I do something on the weekend, it bothers me."

Diane Peters once hawked magic pens at the Canadian National Exhibition. She's now a writer and part-time journalism instructor.

The Lowdown

Job title: Tupperware salesperson.
Salary: From $1,300 a month; star directors like Schultz make around $40,000.
Education/training: Constant training through Tupperware and others salespeople on conference calls, through webinars and at conferences.
Best Part of the Job: "The flexibility and the pay."
Worst Part of the Job: "Managing people across the country when I have never met them."

$15-MILLION GIFT FUNDS NEW POLITICAL MANAGEMENT PROGRAM AT CARLETON Calgary businessman Clayton H. Riddell has donated $15 million to Carleton University to establish Canada's first graduate program in political management. The program aims to improve the practice of politics at all levels of government across the country by providing graduate-level professional training for political officeholders, advisors, campaigners, and staff. The idea for the program began with Preston Manning, who saw the need for a university program to train politicians. In honour of Riddell's gift, the largest in Carleton's history, the program will be named the Clayton H. Riddell Graduate Program in Political Management. Should the program be approved by the Ontario Council on Graduate Studies, the first class of 25 students will begin in September 2011.

Crash course to avoid crisis

BookReview

Crisis Economics

Author: Nouriel Roubin and Stephen Mihm
Publisher: The Penguin Press
Price: $35.00

CRAIG LUND
for Metro Canada

Given we are starting to glimpse the light at the end of this gruelling tunnel referred to by some as the Great Recession, the general population has settled with the conclusion that this crisis — as it was — is an anomaly.

According to authors Nouriel Roubin and Stephen Mihm, crises are a natural occurrence, with far more predictability than is realized.

"Crises, we argue, are neither the freak events that modern economics has made them seem nor the rare 'black swans' that other commentators have made them out to be" says Roubin and Mihm.

Cobbled together as part history lesson, current case study and crystal ball gazing, Crisis Economics lays out a number of global examples of financial collapse including the speculative bubble in tulips in Holland in the 1630s, the South Sea Bubble of 1720 and, of course, the Great Depression of the 1930s amongst others.

What I found especially helpful was the explanation of financial jargon that the authors argue even some economists don't quite understand. You've heard the buzz words — designed to make simple things seem more complicated than they need be. "Moral hazard, leverage, bank run, regulatory arbitrage, current account deficit, securitization, deflation, credit derivative, credit crunch and liquidity crunch, to name a few."

Other than the fact that as a public we are recession fatigued, as the old adage goes: Those who don't know history are destined to repeat it — this is the book we all hope our money managers and politicians have read or plan to read.

Sweet and Wild is the new album from Jewel.

Jewel still shines

Success allows singer to call the shots

NICK KREWEN
for Metro Canada

Sweet and Wild, out tomorrow, might be Jewel's latest album released under the country music banner, but don't expect the 36-year-old singer and songwriter to stylistically pigeonhole herself.

All you need to do is look at her nine-album catalogue to truly appreciate her diversity: there's the folkish-pop sound of her 1995 12-million selling debut Pieces Of You; the dance-rhythm orientation of 2003's 0304; and last year's intimately stark, acoustic Lullaby.

"I see it all as the same," Kilcher told Metro Saturday from Florence, Ind., where she's part-way through a tour that won't hit Canada until 2011.

"To me it seems so natural: If you go into your closet, you might own sweatpants and a business suit and golfing clothes — but they all belong to the same person.

"It's a three-dimensional reflection of me. I'm p—y, acerbic and sarcastic, but I'm also very earnest, sincere and poetic."

Sweet and Wild is out tomorrow

And make no mistake: it's Jewel who calls the shots, ever since the mind-boggling success of Pieces Of You — propelled by the Top 10 hits Foolish Games, Who Will Save Your Soul and You Were Meant For Me — made her financially comfortable for life.

"My first album really gave me freedom because it made me so much money that I never really had to have a hit again," she explains. "And so, instead of feeling all this pressure — like how am I going to follow this up and have bigger hits — it took pressure off me.

"I felt like I can just have fun for the rest of my life," she laughs. "As long as I'm smart with my money."

So Jewel has a simpler objective these days. "My goals in life are to hopefully have longevity and continue to focus on the craft and get better at writing."

For Sweet and Wild, Jewel took a different tact: she invited some of Nashville's top songwriters to write at the Texas ranch she shares with her rodeo champion husband, Ty Murray.

"Stay Here Forever (her current single) and What You Are are two songs I got from those sessions," she says.

Jewel says the 11 songs on Sweet and Wild "showcase both sides of my personality."

"I like to read poetry and sit under trees, but I also ride my motorcycle, shoot guns and smoke a cigar if there's a good one around."

Sheen wants theatrical plea deal

PEOPLE Attorneys for Charlie Sheen have approached a Colorado non-profit theatre about having the actor do public service work as part of a plea deal in his domestic violence case, the theatre's artistic director said.

Sheen's duties, if the deal is approved, would include teaching a class and helping with Theatre Aspen's three summer shows, Paige Price said.

"I certainly think he has the career credentials," she said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mills' nanny loses case

LEGAL A judge on Friday rejected claims by a nanny that she was mistreated by Paul McCartney's ex-wife, Heather Mills.

Sara Trumble told an employment tribunal in southern England that she was hired to look after Mills and McCartney's daughter Beatrice, now 6, but was relegated to domestic chores after returning from maternity leave in 2008. She also claimed that Mills forced her to work long hours without extra pay.

Tribunal judge Steven Vowles dismissed Trumble's claims for sexual discrimination and unfair dismissal, saying he "did not find the claimant to be a persuasive witness."

"The claimant's account of the respondent's alleged animosity towards her pregnancy, maternity and childcare responsibility was not supported by the surrounding facts proved by the tribunal," the ruling said.

Mills had denied the claims, saying she had treated 26-year-old Trumble like a daughter. She said the relationship turned sour when she refused to give the nanny money to pay for breast enlargement surgery.

A spokeswoman said Mills was delighted with the ruling.

Mills and McCartney married in 2002 and divorced in 2008.

Bollywood Oscar night

Many stars attend event in Sri Lanka despite calls for boycott

Hit comedy film 3 Idiots starring superstar Aamir Khan took home most of the awards on offer at the annual Bollywood Oscars on the weekend, including best Indian movie.

The film directed by Rajkumar Hirani that revolves around the lives of three engineering students won 16 out of 31 awards, including best director, at the International Indian Film Awards held in Sri Lanka's capital, Colombo, on Saturday.

Kareena Kapoor, who starred in 3 Idiots, shared the best actress award with Vidya Balan who was in Paa, a film about a 12-year-old suffering from progeria, a rare, genetic disease that causes rapid aging.

The best actor award went to Bollywood icon Amitabh Bachchan, who played the child in Paa.

Hollywood makeup artists Christien Tinsley and Dominie Till bagged an award for their work on Bachchan's much older appearance.

Bachchan was not at the awards ceremony. Neither were other big Bollywood names Aamir Khan and Shah Rukh Khan.

They and other Bollywood stars had been asked to boycott the event by some actors and directors from India's southern state of Tamil Nadu, who alleged Sri Lankan forces killed ethnic Tamil civilians in the final stages of the war last year.

Sri Lanka's military defeated Tamil Tiger rebels who had fought for a separate homeland for minority Tamils, who have family and cultural links with the people of Tamil Nadu.

M.I.A. is latest artist to battle with the press

PAT HEALY
Metro World News

M.I.A.

MUSIC When M.I.A. posted the song I'm A Singer on her label's website last week, she was not only escalating her feud with New York Times writer Lynn Hirschberg, she was also taking part in the peculiar tradition of slagging a journalist through song. The lyrics to I'm a Singer seem to be a direct response to last week's New York Times Magazine article by Hirschberg, which the artist alleges was a misrepresentation of her.

On the same page as the song, M.I.A. placed audio clips of her interview with Hirschberg as proof that she was manipulated.

As for the lyrics of the song, M.I.A. raps that "the story's always f–ed by the time it hits/And why the hell would journalists be thick as sh–?/'Cuz lies equals power equals politics."

If musicians have legitimate beefs with the journalists who don't tell their story accurately, they have the perfect forum to get the word out, but their resultant song needs to hold up to help their cause. But the problem with songs like this is that they age quickly.

Look at some of these samples, and it's clear how difficult it can be for listeners to find a universal truth to which they can relate after the news story blows away.

Get in the Ring by Guns N' Roses (1991)

This paranoid rant is heavy on the use of specific names and light on the quality control. Axl Rose taunts writers and editors including "Bob Guccione Jr. at Spin," which is not exactly the most lyrical name to put into verse. He goes on to speculate that the younger Guccione dissed Gn'R because he's jealous his Penthouse publisher father has more luck with the ladies — an interesting, if not potentially libelous, allegation.

Sample lyric: "I got a thought that would be nice/I'd like to crush your head tight in my vice/Pain!/And that goes for all you punks in the press/That want to start sh— by printin' lies/Instead of the things we said."

A Letter to the New York Post by Public Enemy (1991)

This one reads like an actual letter, with Chuck D and Flavor Flav airing their grievances about a paper that at the time had been delivering "190 years continuous of f—ed up news," and how Jet magazine, which was supposed to be an ally to the group, ran a story about Flav assaulting his girlfriend, but instead of trying to get a statement from Public Enemy, just used a quote from the newspaper.

Box office

Estimated ticket sales for the weekend:

1. SHREK FOREVER AFTER: $25.3 million US
2. GET HIM TO THE GREEK: $17.4 million
3. KILLERS: $16.1 million
4. PRINCE OF PERSIA: THE SANDS OF TIME $13.9 million
5. SEX AND THE CITY 2: $12.7 million
6. MACGRUBER: $11.3 million
7. IRON MAN 2: $7.8 million
8. SPLICE: $7.5 million
9. ROBIN HOOD: $5.1 million
10. LETTERS TO JULIET: $3 million

Man convicted in Dunst robbery

HANDBAG HEIST ENDS WITH JUSTICE FOR SPIDEY'S LEADING LADY It was a real-life remake, with a different ending.

A mechanic was convicted Friday of burglary in the theft of Kirsten Dunst's $2,000 designer purse and actor Simon Pegg's cellphone and other items from a chic hotel, a 2007 heist that forced the co-stars to twice play the part of witnesses.

James Jimenez, who said he just tagged along on what he thought was a co-defendant's legitimate errand, was convicted of trespassing after a trial last fall. But that jury deadlocked on the more serious burglary charge, spurring a retrial that brought the actors back to the witness stand this week.

Their roles were simple: They explained that their possessions disappeared from a So-Ho Grand Hotel penthouse suite they were using as a lounge during filming for How to Lose Friends & Alienate People, and that they didn't know the men they later saw ambling around the penthouse floor on surveillance video.

The star witnesses added a dash of Hollywood to the Manhattan trials and gave jurors a behind-the-scenes look at moviemaking.

Dunst, best known for her roles in the Spider-Man series, and Pegg, whose credits include last year's Star Trek movie, described details ranging from the duties of a third assistant director to their takeout dinner from the high-end sushi restaurant Nobu.

A representative for Dunst didn't immediately respond to an email inquiry after the verdict. Pegg's spokeswoman declined to comment.

Jimenez, 36, faces up to 15 years in prison at his sentencing, set for June 23. He still maintains his innocence and plans to appeal, said his lawyer, Robert Parker. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cybill's son enters pretrial program

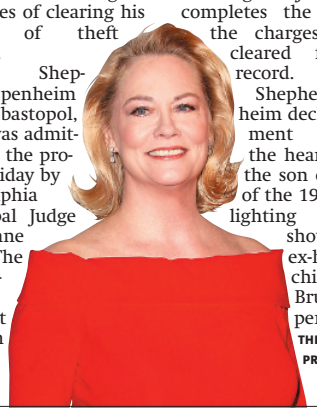
THE PERILS OF HAVING A FAMOUS MOM WHEN YOU'RE NOT! The son of actress Cybill Shepherd has entered a pretrial program in Pennsylvania requiring his attendance at 24 Alcoholics Anonymous meetings in the hopes of clearing his record of theft charges.

Cyrus Shepherd-Oppenheim of Sebastopol, Calif., was admitted into the program Friday by Philadelphia Municipal Judge Georganne Daher. The arrangement was part of an agreement with prosecutors.



The 22-year-old University of Pennsylvania student was charged with stealing cash, a camera and other items from carry-on luggage during a United Airlines flight in January. If he completes the program, the charges will be cleared from his record.

Shepherd-Oppenheim declined comment following the hearing. He is the son of the star of the 1980s Moonlighting television show and her ex-husband, chiropractor Bruce Oppenheim. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Shocking performance

FOLLOWING IN BRITNEY'S FOOTSTEPS? If Miley Cyrus was looking to shock audiences with her performance for Britain's Got Talent, she certainly succeeded.

The Disney star nearly locked lips with a female backup dancer while singing her new single, Can't Be Tamed, on the hit TV show.

"She is going to give Hannah Montana fans a heart attack," former Star magazine editor Bonnie Fuller tells Page Six. "They love her because Hannah Montana is wholesome. She's their big sister who they can look up to as a role model, not somebody who is sexually obsessed and acting out her fantasies onstage." METRO WORLD NEWS

Still saddened by divorce

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE It may have been four years since they split, but Ryan Phillippe is still having trouble getting over his divorce from Reese Witherspoon.

"I still have sadness about my divorce," he says, according to Hollyscoop. "But my aim is always to progress — to be a better father, a better boyfriend, a better friend, a better actor. My goals are to improve in all areas of life. If you're fearful and you're closing yourself off from potentially wonderful or beautiful additions to your life, that's not going to lead anywhere positive." METRO WORLD NEWS

Regretting her words

FISHING FOR SYMPATHY WITH INSENSITIVITY... PROBABLY NOT WISE Kristen Stewart is feeling remorse over her choice of words in comparing being followed by paparazzi to being raped. "I really made an enormous mistake," tells People magazine.

"I'm really sorry about my choice of words. I've made stupid remarks before, and I've always reasoned, 'Whatever. They can think what they want.'" METRO WORLD NEWS

Metro Recipe of the Day

Russian Borscht

INGREDIENTS:

6 medium-size beets with tops
2 cups finely-shredded spinach
2 tbsp butter
1 large onion, chopped
5 cups low-sodium beef broth
540 ml can chopped tomatoes, undrained and cut up
2 tsp dried marjoram
1 tsp salt
1 tsp dried dill weed
1/2 tsp black pepper
2 cups shredded cabbage
2 cups bite-size pieces cooked beef or pork
2 tbsp vinegar
1 tbsp sugar

METHOD:

1. Trim leaves from beets, leaving 2.5 cm of stem attached. In 6-litre Dutch oven, cover beets with lightly salted water. Bring to boil. Lower heat and simmer, covered, 45 minutes or until tender; drain. Cool slightly. Peel beets by slipping off skins while still warm. Cut beets into 3.5 cm x 0.5 cm sticks. Measure 4 cups.

2. In same pot, melt butter over moderately high heat. Add onion and cook 5 minutes or until tender.

3. Add spinach broth, tomatoes, marjoram, salt, dill weed and pepper. Bring to boil. Lower heat and simmer, covered, 5 to 10 minutes or until spinach is tender. Stir in cabbage, beef, vinegar and sugar. Carefully stir in cooked beets. Simmer, covered, 5 to 7 minutes more or until heated through.
